Climate:

Each expedition dossier contains fully detailed information in this matter however consider that temperature varies from 5°C and 30°C in summer season (Dec-Feb).

Other trip features :

The wildlife you may be able to observe are mainly: dolphins, penguins, sea lions and many sea birds such as: pelicans, terns, herons, blackneck swans and others. The typical dish of Chiloé is the "Curanto" which consists of a wide shallow hole dugged in the earth where hot stones are placed; after onion, garlic, salt and orénago; then raw mussels, clams and barnacles are placed and covered with plenty of white wine; finally the last layer is composed of smoked pork, sausages, cooked chicken and potatoes. Each different layer is separated with big fern-like leaves (nalca leave) and above all dry sand is shovelled to keep the heat. The food is served outside.

Support boat:

Our wooden support vessel was built by traditional ship builders of Chiloe, famous for building ships specially adapted to these waters. The maritime heritage of this region called for sturdy ships that would transport people and goods throughout the channels and islands of the Chiloe archipelago. Our local full time crew of three (captain, first mate, cook) ensure our safety and add a cultural touch to our trip that can only be experienced with people who have lived their entire lives in these waters. The ship is directed from a bridge with all of the necessary navigational equipment and radios, to maintain constant contact with our sea kayaking guides. The interior of the ship is an ample space that can comfortably shelter up to 10 people, with a galley that prepares sumptuous meals of fish, shellfish and other local specialties. Other on board amenities include a bathroom, ample space on the deck to enjoy the outdoors, a support dinghy with an outboard motor as well as space to store all of our sea kayaks and equipment.
